

Felix has worked closely with communities on some of the largest regeneration projects in London and has a wealth of experience in community engagement and public relations.

BA (Hons) International Relations and Politics – University of Sheffield

Before joining Planning Potential in July 2017 Felix worked for a specialist stakeholder communications agency based in London, where he managed engagement and consultation programmes for a range of clients.

His detailed understanding of how communities work has enabled him to support several local authorities, developers and public sector organisations seeking to engage with residents on large-scale and sensitive regeneration projects.

Felix has a keen interest in policy debates surrounding housing and urbanism and played a key role setting up and organising the All Party Parliamentary Group for London's Planning and Built Environment.

Outside of work Felix can be found either supporting his hometown football team Blackburn Rovers or his adopted local team Dulwich Hamlet.

felix@planningpotential.co.uk